CONVICTED OF TREASON IN SINN-FEIN REVOLT

After Fighting His Case Through All the Courts, Sir Roger Casement, the Irish Knight Convicted of High Treason, Has Lost and Faces Execution—Charge Grew Out of His Connection With the Sinn-Fein Revolt in Ireland. Fighting Today on Eastern Front Was a Draw Between the French and Germans. The British Made Some Small Gains—Belgians Won From Germans in German East Africa—No Changes Today On the Russian Front.

London, July 18.—Sir Roger Casement, the Irish Knight, loses his appeal against execution for his treason in connection with the Sinn-Fein revolt. Sir Roger was arrested for connection with the revolt on specific charges of landing arms in Ireland from a German submarine, and upon the trial of his case was convicted of high treason and given the death penalty. A great deal of sympathy was expressed for him throughout the country and his case was appealed to the British higher courts of criminal procedure, in the hope of getting a new trial or commutation of sentence. His case has now been affirmed and he faces execution.

War Summary.

(By Associated Press.)
London, July 18.—The Germans attacked the French south of the Somme River last night, gaining ground near Blaches, the French war office announced today. Several attempts to take Lamalsonette failed with heavy losses to the Germans, the statement also says.

Belgian troops operating in German East Africa reached the shores of Lake Victoria and in a seven-hour battle, dispersed the opposing Germans on July 7, taking a German stronghold, according to the Belgian official statement today.

Substantial progress by the British on a thousand-yard front north of Oosttavern was announced by London. Berlin claims the complete repulse of Russian attacks, but broke down or were repulsed by counter attacks. German statement says, adding that heavy British attacks last night against positions on the Somme River front, were repulsed.

TEXAS GUARDSMEN TO GET DISCHARGE

President Refers Telegram to War Department Which Sends It to Funston for Action.

Washington, July 18.—Members of the Texas National Guard doing duty on the border who have dependent families, will have no difficulty in obtaining releases from the army upon proper showing to the department commander. The telegram of Governor James E. Ferguson to President Wilson Monday asking release of such members of the Texas Guard will be referred in the routine to the war department, thence to Major General Funston, commander of the department, to which Texas is assigned.

When the army reorganization bill left the house it contained a provision proposing to pay the dependent families a maximum of $50 per month. The senate substituted for this a declaration that such members of the guard would be excused from duty and that unmarried men, or those without dependents be taken first. The idea was dropped upon statement of the house managers that the question would be dealt with in another bill promising financial relief, and has been adopted in the house.

In the meantime Secretary of War Baker issued an order under the terms of which all members of the National Guard with dependents would be discharged upon their personal application.
